Ramsey Lecture & Honors Forum Induction

March 6, 2018

This year was the 20th annual Ramsey Lecture, which was combined with the Honors Forum induction in order to showcase the rich research and scholarship that Honors Forum members have produced. Thirteen sophomores and 51 freshmen were inducted.

English department graduate students presented a paper which uncritical acceptance of generalizations, "Medieval women were oppressed, robbed of their voices, and their understanding of what we really know about medieval women is obliterated not just by the lack of primary sources, but by the way we teach it." Following the lecture, there was a dinner for the new inductees.
